Jean is a Principal with Pfeiffer, directing the firm’s academic programming, master planning and urban design efforts. Her particular focus over the past two decades of practice has been in planning and programming of arts and cultural facilities. Her projects include campus and community fine and performing arts centers, galleries and museums and cultural districts. Jean is also a skilled facilitator and consensus builder, working with educational institutions, communities, arts organizations, and private clients to develop projects that are both visionary yet fiscally responsible and can be readily implemented. She co-authored a chapter on “Campus Cultural Facilities” for the book Building Type Basics for College and University Facilities, published by John Wiley & Sons, Inc. detailing the steps necessary when planning for new and renovated academic arts facilities.
