

Visual Arts at University of San Diego offers students a comprehensive perspective of the arts, including traditional and emerging practices and the environment to develop advanced skills in at least one sub-discipline: drawing, painting, photography, film/video, sculpture/3D studio art, visual communications or film + media art studies. Combined with close faculty mentorship and opportunities for funded research, Visual Arts at USD is uniquely attentive to individual student development. Enriched by the resources of the art history and architecture areas of the department, the liberal arts context and USD's geographic location, students of the visual arts pursue diverse investigations that prepare them for equally diverse futures.
